

I Am From...

By Rachel

I am from feeling like I am VERY brainy because I love to read and solve math problems.

I am from knowing that I am an animal loving recycler because my class has been working on recycling to help save the earth.

I am from being thankful because my family does so much for me, which makes me know they love me.

I am from knowing that I am content with the people I know and love, happy almost all the time and very social when other people need help.

I am from telling people that I am a helper but not wanting other people to help me when I need it because I am Independent.

I am from knowing how to be a learner that loves to teach younger kids because they can be so cute and I get along really well with them!

I am from being a cup half full person when other people aren't.

I am from feeling like a person with white skin and sometimes feeling ashamed because other white people were mean to black people.

I am from accepting that I am Arabic and sometimes eating Arabic food called Kunafeh which tastes like a cream dessert with cheese.

I am from knowing that I am Norwegian because I am strong and tall like my mom.

I am from being bullied in the past because I am different when it comes to brain types but now feeling relieved since moving schools.

I am from telling people that I am an imaginative creator because I love to create little creatures that look like all sorts of things, from an owl to a love monster!
